

Creating Compound Sentences _____

The following story contains many short, choppy complete sentences. Use conjunctions to rewrite the story to add some compound sentences to add fluency. Use and, but, or, if, so, since, for, and yet when combining sentences.

Once there was a beautiful princess. She had brown hair. She had blue eyes. She was nice. She had a good heart.

Everyone loved the princess. The mean step-mother did not. She would feed the princess scraps. The princess did her chores.

The princess did everything she was asked to do. She would not go hungry. She treated everyone with kindness. She kept a smile on her face.

The step-mother became sick one day. The princess took care of her. The step-mother got well. The step-mother was grateful to the princess. She started treating her nicely. The princess did not have to do quite so many chores. The step-mother began to smile more.

You can learn a lesson from this story. You try to be like the princess. Give the world a kind heart. Kindness will come back to you.

Creating Compound Sentences Answer Key

Once there was a beautiful princess. She had brown hair and blue eyes. She was nice, and she had a good heart.

Everyone loved the princess, but the step-mother did not. She would feed the princess scraps if the princess did her chores.

The princess did everything she was asked to do, so she would not go hungry. She treated everyone with kindness, and she kept a smile on her face.

The step-mother became sick one day, so the princess took care of her. The step-mother got well. She was grateful to the princess, so she started treating her nicely. The princess did not have to do so many chores, and the step-mother began to smile more.

You can learn a lesson from this story, if you try to be like the princess. Give the world a kind heart, and kindness will come back to you.
