

- Verse 1: 'Twas the beginning of a school year. I was ready to write!
My new assignment seemed a sheer delight.
My teacher said to write about my favorite pet.
I took my brand new pencil, and I was set.
- Verse 2: "Fluffy is my bunny. Fluffy lives to hop.
Fluffy eat carrots until Fluffy stops.
Fluffy drinks water. Fluffy is so sweet.
Sometimes, Fluffy even watches Sesame Street."
- Verse 3: The next day, my teacher said we needed to learn a part of speech called pronouns (and she seemed concerned).
Pronouns replace nouns to help our stories flow.
"She" should replace "Fluffy," (she thought I should know).
- Verse 4: "Fluffy is my bunny. She likes to hop.
She eats carrots until she stops.
Fluffy needs water. She is so sweet.
Sometimes, she even watches Sesame Street.
- Verse 5: Pronouns replace nouns. We need them everyday.
I, he, she, you, me, we, him, her,
them, it, they
Don't use your subject again and again.
It will only drive your reader crazy in the end!
- Verse 6: Now you know my story, so I hope you see how pronouns help you be the writer you can be.
Pronouns replace nouns. So now, I see the light!
I've got a sharpened pencil, and I'm ready to write!
