

Using Good and Well (plus exception) _____

The main rule in knowing when to use good and when to use well is to examine the verb in the sentence. If the verb shows action, "well" is your word. If the verb is a linking verb, you use the word "good."

The exception to this rule deals with verbs of observation, or the five senses. Even though look, hear, smell, touch, and taste show action, "good" is the correct word to use after them.

For example:

The pizza looks good.

The pizza tastes good.

The pizza smells good.

Choose either "good" or "well" to complete the following sentences.

That chocolate cake sure looks _____!

I am doing _____ today.

Olivia is a _____ painter.

I think she paints very _____.

I am not a _____ cook.

That apple pie sure smells _____!

Noah can throw the football _____.

Timmy is a _____ basketball player.

When choosing "good" or "well," I feel:

_____confident _____unsure

_____ I need help.

Using Good and Well (plus exception) Answer Key

The main rule in knowing when to use good and when to use well is to examine the verb in the sentence. If the verb shows action, "well" is your word. If the verb is a linking verb, you use the word "good."

The exception to this rule deals with verbs of observation, or the five senses. Even though look, hear, smell, touch, and taste show action, "good" is the correct word to use after them.

For example:

The pizza looks good.

The pizza tastes good.

The pizza smells good.

Choose either "good" or "well" to complete the following sentences.

That chocolate cake sure looks _____! (good)

I am doing _____ today. (well)

Olivia is a _____ painter. (good)

I think she paints very _____. (well)

I am not a _____ cook. (good)

That apple pie sure smells _____! (good)

Noah can throw the football _____. (well)

Timmy is a _____ basketball player. (good)

